Work On Our Hall Starts This Week

Finally, Allora's Community Hall is undergoing repairs to make it safe and operational again. After being out of action since 2022 the local community is looking forward to planning and using the Hall once more.

Community Services Manager with the Southern Downs Regional Council, Michael Bell advises that during the work, toilets in Muir Street could be impacted. If this is the case, the contractor will place directional signage on the fencing to provide alternative facilities. It's also likely that there will be changes on the use of the footpath for the entirety of this project.

"At this stage, the project is expected to run for about ten (10) weeks, which will take it through to 30 April. This practical completion date is subject to no issues arising during the remedial work that may cause some form of delay. We're not expecting any, however, this is still a consideration." Mr Bell said.

Letter to the Editor...

Dear Editor,

I know I speak for many people in our community in saying "Thank You" to David and Zita for their service and commitment for 26 years to the town of Allora. Seven days a week businesses certainly take their toll. Hopefully you may be able to have a holiday together in the near future, or even go to a football game together. Thank you again.

Love and best wishes for the future.

Denise Dalglish, Allora

Meeting Called To Discuss Wind Farm

A Victorian-based wind-power company is believed to be planning construction of up to 60 wind turbines and more than 30km of high-voltage power lines and towers in the Allora area.

Wind Prospect Pty Ltd have formally approached a number of landowners on the Eastern side of Allora to discuss the proposal, and are understood to be holding several on-farm private meetings with landholders this week to discuss the plans.

Wind farms have proven a controversial matter in rural areas across Australia, with residents and landowners often divided over the perceived benefits and drawbacks of the turbines in their (sometimes literal) backyards.

Given the high level of community interest in this issue and possible effects on both the community and the Allora region's local environment, a Community Landholder information meeting will be held at 6.30pm sharp on Thursday, 14th March at the Allora Sports Club, aimed at providing as much information to local residents as possible.

All local landholders and residents are welcome to attend, with representatives from both Property Rights Australia and Agforce invited, along with State and Federal Members of Parliament and local mayor and councillors.

AgForce South East Queensland director Scott Reed said the farming peak body looked forward to the opportunity to assist Allora district landowners in getting more information on the subject.

"Agforce understands the community concerns and we will be attending the community event"

Goomburra valley property owner Graham Park was among those approached by the Wind farm group and said he welcomed the chance to attend a community meeting and "I am impressed that the Allora community is running a community event where we can all get more information," he said.

"A wind turbine farm in the region is a whole new idea to me and I have mixed emotions and thoughts on the concept; I look forward to attending the meeting and hopefully getting some of my questions answered."

Property Rights Australia spokesman Jim Willmott

expressed his concern about the proposed development, especially based on his observations of large-scale turbine farms elsewhere.

"Industrial sized wind developments like this have cumulative impacts on rural landscapes and amenity, biodiversity values, agricultural systems, community infrastructure and overall regional liveability," he said.

"The reckless roll-out of renewables are dividing communities and currently there are inadequate governance and strategic assessment mechanisms in place."

Old Fire Station

The allotment at 80 Herbert Street now occupied by the old fire station was laid bare by the 1914 Holmes' Buildings' fire. It is not known if there was a building on the site before May 1950 when Eddie Balke, a tailor, advertised the allotment for public auction, 'Improved with dwelling 18' x 36', erected as a shop, lavatory at rear'.

In November 1951, Allora Dry Cleaners moved into the building from their former site in Muir Street. The dry cleaners occupied the site until closing in February 1963.

Following a public meeting called by the Rev. Fr. McCormack, the Warwick Fire Brigade decided to establish a base in Allora and the building at 80 Herbert Street was adapted for use as a fire station. The building was officially opened by Allan Fletcher M.L.A. on the 29th May 1965.

After a new fire station was built in Muir Street, the Herbert Street building was used as a seed analysis laboratory for a time by Petrina Gardiner. Dorothy Haig established 'The Old

Allora Enjoyed Marco's Visits

Marco Giori was welcomed as a friend when he attended functions in Allora so the local community is sorry to hear that Marco will not be standing for re-election to the Southern Downs Regional Council.

However, due to past health problems and an urge to follow his instincts as a performer Marco has called it quits.

Marco Giori at Allora Sports Club.

In Marco's words –
"It is with deep gratitude that I thank the residents of the Southern Downs and Granite Belt for the privilege of serving as your elected official for the last four years.

The mountains are calling and the highways beckoning, as they have done for most of my life. Being a nomadic and creative soul by nature I find it difficult to sit still for too long.

I have been inspired by those in our community who volunteer, organize, and manage events, steer committees and support so many non-for-profit organizations, sporting clubs and charity groups. Thanks for inviting me and my wife Julie, to so many of your events and projects, asking me to say the occasional poem, all the while proving that you the residents, and ratepayers, are without doubt the most valuable assets our region has.

Last year I also suffered a random pulmonary embolism, died for 3 minutes, and was resuscitated by my wife and son-in-law. After a short hospital stay and now six months of recuperation I have fully recovered and have an abundance of energy. I filled out my candidate nomination forms but simply could not hand them in. I have always followed my instincts and cannot deny my playful spirit's call to continue down the road less travelled.

As any performer knows, the more you travel the more you work, and mostly in the last four years any occasional leave I applied for was for that express purpose, to go to work. Even though I have enjoyed the role of Councillor, it is time to pursue various business and personal projects while continuing to reconnect with my passion for performance poetry. I hope to see you at one of my gigs soon."

Growers on Alert for Fall Armyworm

Fall armyworm (FAW) are being detected at unprecedented levels in sorghum crops across Central Queensland, the Western and Darling Downs and northern New South Wales causing what experts predict could be the most significant impact on sorghum since the pest's arrival in Australia in 2020.

Queensland Department of Agriculture and Fisheries (DAF) principal entomologist Melina Miles urged growers to be alert, but not alarmed and take a considered approach to making decisions about the need for control.

"We know that FAW can be devastating and we're seeing significant crop damage in southern and Central Queensland in sorghum," Dr Miles said.

"We're in the early stages of developing robust management recommendations for this pest and research is ongoing, but what we do know is that FAW populations build up between October and March. Where they can, growers are adopting an early-sowing strategy to largely avoid severe damage, and this has been effective in 2021-23.

"This season we have late crops planted on the December rain. Because of that, more growers are seeing high FAW populations and damage in crops from emergence throughout the vegetative stages.

Dr Miles said in order to decide whether an infestation warrants control, growers should assess the number and size of FAW larvae per plant. The only effective way to do this is to pull plants apart and unroll the whorl.

"Just looking at damage is risky as it doesn't tell you what the damage potential is of the infestation over the next week or so.

"As with other caterpillar pests, like helicoverpa, the natural mortality of eggs and small larvae is high - possibly as high as 80 per cent, however, the mortality of larger larvae (4th - 6th instar) tends to be much lower, so you can assume most of the larger larvae you find will survive and cause damage.

"Over the past three seasons, once sorghum started to come into head FAW infestations have declined. However, this year we are seeing infestations persist into grain filling. There are instances of FAW damaging grain in the heads, but not to the same extent as a similar infestation of helicoverpa.

Fall armyworm (FAW) can be commonly mistaken for Helicoverpa (previously known as heliothis). FAW larvae (right) are typically slightly darker and less active than Helicoverpa larvae (left). Image: GRDC

For information about identification and registered chemical control options, growers should contact their local advisers and visit the GRDC Fall armyworm page: grdc.com.au/resources-and-publications/resources/fall-armyworm

Warriors Shine in Knockout Carnival

The Brayden Paix led Wattles Warriors contingent that took part in the recent annual Goondiwindi Knockout Carnival returned home as Grand Finalists, but alas not with the major silverware.

Eight teams contested the men's Knockout with five teams challenging in the women's competition at Goondiwindi's Gilbert Oval complex on Saturday February 17th.

Along with Brayden, the Warriors contingent of top graders Austin Jennings, Matthew Christensen & Tyson Stevens all wore the colours of 'Rod's Rebels'.

The Rebels, which is a memorial team, was arranged by Wattles' Brayden, in memory of his cousin Adam Rodilossi who passed away in a car accident on 2020

The footy season might not have kicked off yet, but the Goondiwindi Knockout is considered among the most anticipated pre-season carnivals in the region.

In what organisers rated an amazing day of country knockout footy, 'Rod's Rebels' finished behind the Katrina McGrady Memorial team 16 - 6 in the Men's Warriors A Grade players Tyson Stevens, Austin Jennings, Brayden Paix and Matthew Christensen were all members of the Rod's Rebels team at the recent Goondiwindi Knockout Carnival.
